

In an area where radio stations constantly have static and therefore not quality and not much for variety, XM radio is a solution who's time has come. It was more than enough when the state of Ohio decided to tax subscribers for listening to XM radio, now, even before they have weather and traffic for my area, the FCC is trying to stop what can be a VERY effective form of public information. We, the subscribers, pay for the service and WE should decide what content we receive.
